++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Another dry, cold night, possible frost. Dry and fine tomorrow.

This Evening and Tonight:
This evening, cloud dissipates in the far west, leaving clear skies throughout, allowing for another chilly night for most, though remaining dry and fine. A few patches of morning frost for some. Remaining breezy, primarily across Devon and Cornwall. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Monday:
After a frosty start, bright skies give a warm, dry day throughout the region. Winds ease slightly through the day but remain breezy in the west. Becoming cloudy overnight. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Showers on Tuesday, primarily in the east, with some heavy showers overnight. Scattered showers on Wednesday and Thursday, but drier. Cloudy, and turning colder with a continued overnight frost risk.
